FOURTH SUNDAY OF EASTER
APRIL 25, 2010
 "I have made you a light to the Gentiles,
 that you may be an instrument of salvation
 to the ends of the earth."
 - Acts 13:47b

WHO ARE WE?

Who are "we" today as we sing, "We are his people, the sheep of his flock," in the responsorial psalm? It is very easy to think that it is just us, at this Mass, or just the members of this parish or diocese, or perhaps we are thinking it is all Roman Catholics in the United States. But "we" are much larger and broader than that. If you take a globe or atlas in your hand, it would be difficult to point to any place on land where "we" aren't singing this psalm today. Not only that, but "we" are the saints who survived the great time of trial, as described in Revelation's reading today. And "we" continue to grow not just in numbers, but in complexity and diversity as the work begun by Paul and Barnabas in today's first reading continues. But, even though who "we" are, the flock of the Lord, is almost beyond our ability to comprehend, we all hear the voice of Jesus Christ, our one and only shepherd, as we continue through the Easter season to follow him faithfully.

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For Adults

Do I get distracted by the voices of false shepherds?
 What helps me focus more on the voice of the Good Shepherd?

For Children

How do I know that Jesus, the Good Shepherd, is protecting and guiding me? When do I feel his love and care the most?

“Receiving the Next Archbishop of Los Angeles”

The first in a series of three articles on the office of the bishop by members of the Archdiocesan Theological Commission

The Archdiocese of Los Angeles, with nearly five million Catholics, is the largest diocese in the United States and among the largest in the world. Consequently, there is widespread interest, both nationally and internationally, about the recent appointment of our next archbishop. For Catholics, and specifically for Catholics in Los Angeles, what does it mean for us to receive a new archbishop?

The Catholic Church is not a congregational church in which each residential community is autonomous and independent, joined in a voluntary association of similar communities. Ours is not a presbyterial church governed by a regional council of ordained ministers. And ours is not an episcopal church under the authority of a local bishop and joined in union with a national body of bishops. Rather, as Catholics, the local church, called a diocese, is a community of faithful gathered with, and under the authority of their bishop who is in union with the Catholic bishop of Rome, our Holy Father the Pope, and other Catholic bishops throughout the world in what is known as the College of Bishops.

As the bishop of a local church, or diocese, the local bishop who heads the diocese is known as the “Ordinary.” Like all bishops who share in the Apostolic Succession down through the centuries, he is a successor of the Apostles and, as the Ordinary, is the successor of the Apostles in his own diocese. Although the Ordinary is selected and appointed by the pope, he is neither the representative nor delegate of the pope in the governing of his diocese. Rather, through bonds of charity with the Holy Father and with all other Catholic bishops worldwide, he autonomously governs his own diocese in union with theirs and so contributes to the universality of the worldwide Catholic Church.

As the bishop of his diocese, the Ordinary exercises a threefold pastoral ministry on behalf of the people entrusted to his care. His ministry is to sanctify, to teach, and to govern the people of God in this local church. This parallels the threefold ministry of Christ as priest, prophet and king, and is mirrored in three focal points of the bishop’s office – the altar at which he celebrates the principal liturgies of the diocese, the chair or cathedra, from which the term cathedral church is derived and from which the bishop exercises his office of teaching the people of God, and the crozier which he carries as shepherd and ruler over the local church. More will be written on this and other important aspects of the office of the bishop in the coming weeks.

Los Angeles is termed an archdiocese in distinction from a diocese, but what exactly does this mean? Every diocese is of equal weight and value in the universal church, but for organizational purposes, some dioceses are designated as archdioceses. The United States is divided into thirty three geographic areas known as provinces, and each province contains two or more dioceses. The diocese associated with the principal city or metropolis of the province is termed the archdiocese. The others are known as suffragan dioceses. The bishop of the archdiocese is termed the archbishop, but the title does not give him real authority over the other dioceses of the metropolitan province. The Metropolitan Province of Los Angeles is comprised of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles and the dioceses of Fresno, Monterey, Orange, San Bernardino, and San Diego.

Los Angeles has been favored with the elevation of its current and two previous archbishops to the title and additional responsibilities of being a cardinal in the universal Catholic Church. While this is a significant distinction and honor, the principal title and responsibility of the bishop of Los Angeles is “Archbishop.” With this in mind, we prepare to welcome the appointment of the next Archbishop of Los Angeles.

While it is primarily for the un-churched or inactive Catholic, it is also helpful for those who want to explore their faith more deeply. The talks explain the gospel clearly, in a way that is relevant for today.
